

WATERFALL WEEKEND GETAWAY: DISCOVER 11 BREATHTAKING FALLS IN THREE DAYS

Historic precipitation leads to flourishing waterfalls in Redding and Shasta Cascade

REDDING, Calif. – April XX, 2017 – A unique concentration of waterfalls once created by volcanic activity allows visitors to marvel in the outdoor paradise of Redding and Shasta Cascade.

Three days is ample time to experience 11 of the dozens of waterfalls close in proximity to Redding.

Visitors are taking advantage of the wettest winter in nearly a century as the California Department of Water Resources reported the northern Sierra Nevada had more than 89.7 inches of precipitation since October. It brings the waterfalls to life, offering breathtaking spring waterfalls after a statewide drought.

“The waterfalls are thriving this spring thanks to the historic rain and snow levels,” said T.J. Holmes, the communications coordinator for the Redding Convention & Visitors Bureau. “A popular attraction is the 220-foot Whiskeytown Falls, one of 11 that are roaring right now and are easily accessible from Redding.”

Each waterfall is less than a 90-minute drive from Redding, which is an outdoor oasis for all ages. The city is surrounded by mountains, offers more than 225 miles of trails to hike, bike or walk, along with national and state parks featuring the crisp Sacramento River running right through downtown.

Three-day waterfall itinerary

Day 1: Eastbound extravaganza

Potem Creek Falls – If you are looking for adventure in the Redding area, you won't want to miss this local hangout — an easy hike to a hidden 45-foot waterfall into a deep canyon.

Hatchet Creek Falls – Lion Slide Falls, or Hatchet Creek Falls as its known by locals, is easily accessible on a short trail. Down the center of the waterfall rests a fallen tree, transformed into a stairway by a brave chainsawer, which is one of two paths to the top of the waterfall.

Burney Falls – The 129-foot waterfall is fed by underground springs and never runs slow. It pumps more than 100 million of gallons of water daily, which is why it is known as the eighth wonder of the world.

Day 2: Venturing north

Hedge Creek Falls – Check out the small cave located behind this waterfall, offering a unique perspective from behind the cascading water.

Upper McCloud Falls – The swift river escapes a narrow gorge to crash on small steps to a beautiful aquamarine pool at its base, ready to catch your spirit and calm your soul.

Middle McCloud Falls – Middle Falls is the largest and most impressive with a 44-foot drop, and provides a magnificent view. This waterfall is one of the widest in California at 120 feet, creating a veil of white water during spring. Rock jumping and swimming is a favorite local past time.

Lower McCloud Falls – This is the lowest of three levels of the McCloud River Falls, with a 12-foot broad plunge into a large pool. Surrounding the pool are large rocks perfect for sunbathing, making this location popular for swimming and relaxing.

Day 3: Heading west to Whiskeytown

Crystal Creek – This easily accessible and Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) compliant trail is a must see waterfall in Whiskeytown National Recreation Area. It also connects to a less traveled trail, leading to a multitude of falling cascades. If you have time to swim, this spot is not only picturesque but also a secret local spot.

Whiskeytown Falls – This magnificent waterfall is the tallest in Whiskeytown National Recreation Area at a towering 220 feet. It was rediscovered in 2004 after being kept secret since 1967. This trail is a bit more challenging than others but the beauty of the falls is worth the hike.

Brandy Creek Falls – Brandy Creek Falls is one of the widest waterfalls in Whiskeytown National Recreation Area with five cascades that rush over the granite rock of the canyon. Here you will find the unique Indian Rhubarb plant displaying bright colors in spring and fall.
